Charlotte's Web-E. B. White

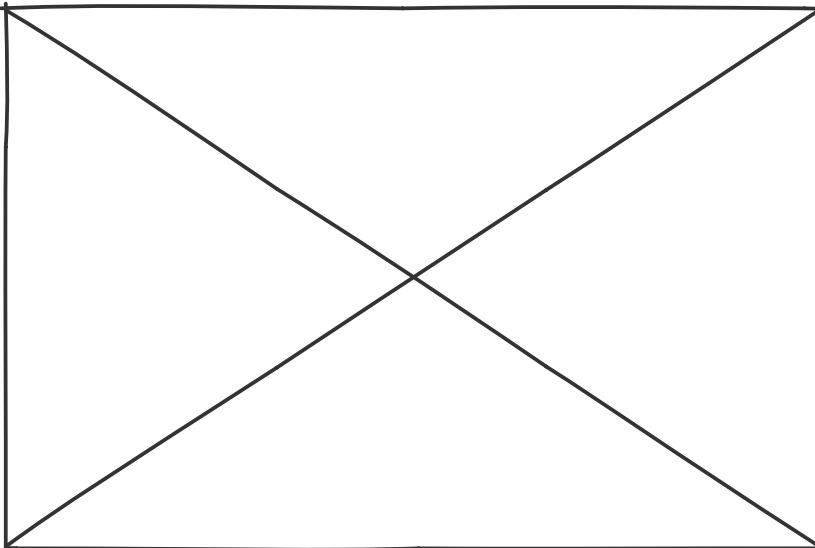

"Why aren't you going with the others?" Fern asked.

"They're taking Wilbur away," said Avery. "Papa says he's too small."

Fern's eyes filled with tears. She ran across the yard and held the tiny pig close to her chest.

"But it's unfair!" she cried. "He's small because he was born that way."

Her father looked at her quietly for a moment.

"You'll have to learn someday that life isn't always fair," he said gently.

Fern hugged the little pig even tighter.

"Then I'm going to take care of him myself."

And from that day on, Wilbur was no longer just the smallest pig in the barn. He became Fern's friend.

The wind howled across the hills as Liora clutched her clock tighter. The kingdom of Eldoria had never seen a storm like this before.

Alice

In the distance, the ancient tower loomed-dark, silent, and calling her name.

She took a deep breath and stepped forward, knowing that there was no turning back. |

Maybe change 'ancient tower' to something more mysterious?

What if we add more details about the tower?
